Acknowledgments

I would like to express my deepest appreciation to my dissertation cochairs, Joseph Galaskiewicz and Robin Stryker. Their astute advice, feedback, and encouragement has been so very instrumental to every aspect of this research. I am wholeheartedly grateful to my dissertation committee members, Ronald Breiger and Brian Hilligoss, for their generous guidance and suggestions. Thank you to the University of Arizona Graduate and Professional Student Council for providing funding for this research. I would like to recognize Nina Eliasoph and the Junior Theorists Symposium volunteers for providing critical feedback and allowing me to bring disjointed fluidity to the attention of the scholarly community. A special thank you to Corey Abramson for his valuable literature recommendations. I would also like to acknowledge Albert Bergesen. Our conversations were a valuable and cherished source of creative inspiration. I lovingly thank my friends and family for all the support, which I will forever pay forward.
