I am delighted to announce that the Journal's Editorial Board has gained 16 new members. I warmly congratulate and thank them for joining our team. As I have explained in previous editorials, I see this journal as a "community of people comprised of readers, editors, authors, reviewers and the administrative team, who are all connected by ideas, debates, and findings regarding the management of organisations." (Cardao-Pito, 2020, p. 52, Cardao-Pito, 2019). The members of the Editorial Board have an important role in helping us evaluating submissions, promoting the journal and finding new ideas and contexts that could productively suit our aims and scope. This increase in the members of the Board is aligned with the strong growth of submissions we have been receiving over the past two years.

The new members of the Editorial Board whom we welcome are as follows:

- (1) Alicia Mas Tur, Universidad de València, Spain,
- (2) Berend van der Kolk, Associate Professor, VU Amsterdam (Netherlands),
- (3) Brad Mehlenbacher, University of Waterloo, Canada,
- (4) Chantale Jeanrie, Université Laval (Canada),
- (5) Franklin Velasco, Universidad San Francisco de Quito, Ecuador,
- (6) Hashim Zameer, Nanjing University of Aeronautics and Astronautics Nanjing, China,
- (7) Hannaneh Hajishirzi, University of Washington, USA,
- (8) João Oliveira, Essex Business School, University of Essex (UK),
- (9) Julia Smith, University of Strathclyde (UK),
- (10) Ke Cao, Lazaridis School of Business & Economics – Wilfrid Laurier University (Canada),
- (11) Kun-Huang Huarng, National Taipei University of Business,
