ABOUT THE CONTRIBUTORS

Eitan Y. Alimi is Associate Professor of Political Sociology at the Hebrew University, Jerusalem. Recent publications have appeared in Political Studies, Theory and Society, Sociological Forum, Comparative Politics, and Mobilization. Oxford University Press published recent books on comparative processes of radicalization (2015) and the Arab Spring in a global comparative perspective (2016).

Patrick G. Coy is Professor Emeritus of Peace and Conflict Studies at Kent State University. He has published more than 35 peer-reviewed journal articles and book chapters and received the Distinguished Career Award from the Peace, War and Social Conflict Section of the ASA in 2016. He was Series Editor of Research in Social Movements, Conflicts and Change from 2000 to 2018.

Trisha L. Crawshaw is a Doctoral Candidate at Southern Illinois University, Carbondale. Her research interests include gender, youth studies, and resistance narratives.

William F. Danaher is a Professor and Chair of Sociology at Southern Illinois University, Carbondale. His current research focuses on work and musicians, social movement framing, and authenticity.

Esperanza Hernández Delgado holds a PhD in Peace, Conflict and Democracy from the University of Granada, Spain. She is a Peace Researcher, Professor at La Salle University and Consultant on peace-related issues, including local peace initiatives, civil resistance, mediations in the Colombian armed conflict, peace processes, peace education, and reconciliation.

María Belén Garrido is a Research Lecturer at the Pontificia Universidad Católica del Ecuador, a Researcher at FLACSO, Ecuador, and a PhD student at the Catholic University of Eichstätt-Ingolstadt. Her main expertise and publications are in peace and conflict studies with a particular focus on civil resistance.

Michelle I. Gawerc is an Associate Professor of Sociology and Global Studies at Loyola University Maryland. She is the Author of Prefiguring Peace: Israeli-Palestinian Peacebuilding Partnerships. Her research has been published in numerous journals including: Mobilization, Social Movement Studies, Peace and Change, International Journal of Peace Studies, and Peace Review.

Vera Heuer is an Assistant Professor in the Department of International Studies and Political Science at Virginia Military Institute. Her research focuses on social mobilization and the relationship between state actors and social movement organizations, and how these dynamics are framed in the public sphere in India and beyond.

Lisa Leitz, PhD is the Delp-Wilkinson Professor of Peace Studies at Chapman University. She is the Editor of RSMCC and the Author of Fighting for Peace: Veterans and Military Families in the Anti-Iraq War Movement, winner of the 2015 American Sociological Association's Peace, War and Social Conflict Outstanding Book Award.

The late Gregory M. Maney was a Professor of Sociology and Harry H. Wachtel Distinguished Professor for the Study of Nonviolent Social Change at Hofstra University. His research focused on ethnic and minority group relations, conflict transformation strategies, cross-cultural awareness, peace movement discourses, facilitation, and organizing skills.

Cécile Mouly, PhD (Cambridge University), is a Research Professor at FLACSO Ecuador and practitioner specialized in peace and conflict studies. She has facilitated trainings in conflict analysis, conflict transformation and peacebuilding and published on civil resistance in the context of armed conflict, and the role of civil society in peacebuilding.

Sharon Erickson Nepstad is Distinguished Professor of Sociology at the University of New Mexico. She is the Author of five books on nonviolence, religion, and social movements. She has been a visiting Scholar at Notre Dame's Kroc Institute for International Peace Studies and Princeton's Center for the Study of Religion.

Pamela Oliver is a Professor of Sociology at the University of Wisconsin, Madison. She continues to do popular work on racial disparities in criminal justice and academic work on news coverage of Black protests and repression.

Charlotte Ryan is a Professor of Sociology, University of Massachusetts, Lowell. She coordinates the Media Research Action Project's website www.mrap.info. With Gregory M. Maney she Co-chaired the URBAN Research Network Publications Committee (<http://urbanresearchnetwork.org/>) which worked to extend academic recognition of evidence-based community participatory action research (CBPAR).

Joshua Satre is a Sié Fellow and MA Candidate at the University of Denver concentrating in quantitative methods. He received a BA with Honors in Political Science from Swarthmore College in 2013. While at Swarthmore, he studied abroad in Northern Ireland, sparking an interest in conflict resolution and mapping.

Lee A. Smithey is a Professor of Peace and Conflict Studies and Sociology at Swarthmore College in Swarthmore, Pennsylvania, USA. He studies peacebuilding, social conflict, and social movements, particularly with respect to ethnopolitical conflict and nonviolent conflict methods. He is Primary Investigator of the Northern Ireland Mural Mapping Project.

Gregory D. Squires is a Professor of Sociology at George Washington University and a member of the Fair Housing Task Force of the Leadership Conference on Civil and Human Rights and the Social Science Advisory Board of the Poverty & Race Research Action Council in Washington, DC.

Lynne M. Woehrle has a PhD in Social Science and is an Associate Professor at University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee in the Sustainable Peacebuilding Program in the College of Nursing. She has published widely on social change and is deeply committed to working with organizations to use scientific investigation and nonviolent methods to further goals of equity, inclusion, peace, and justice.

Mustafa Yavaş is a PhD Candidate in Sociology at Yale University. He is interested in class, culture and inequality, sociology of work, political sociology, and religion. His research uses qualitative methods such as fieldwork and interviews, and computational methods such as agent-based modeling, social network analysis, and automated text analysis.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Bringing Down Divides is a labor of love in honor of Greg Maney and advances the scholarship that Greg enjoyed and supported. Maney was the Wachtel Distinguished Professor for the Study of Nonviolent Social Change, a Professor of Sociology, and the Director of the Center for Civic Engagement at Hofstra University. Being a scholar, especially one who wore so many hats and devoted extensive time to mentoring undergraduates and other scholars, surely took Greg's time away from his family. Thus, we hope this volume will help his wife Mary Coyle and son Enzo see the impact of that time and how grateful so many of us are for the work of our colleague and friend.

A number of scholars were needed to make this book a reality. First, the extraordinary remembrance of Greg's life at Hofstra University in October 2017 brought together people who appreciated Greg's life and work, and culminated in the idea of this volume. The speakers informed the editors about the breadth of Greg's work and influence, well beyond those we had worked on with Greg. As Editor of RSMCC, Patrick G. Coy suggested this series as the perfect home for advancing knowledge in the spirit of Greg's work.

We are grateful to the contributors to Bringing Down Divides. The authors of the lead chapters, Lee A. Smithey, Joshua Satre, Sharon Erickson Nepstad, Charlotte Ryan, and Gregory Squires provided excellent submissions illuminating each type of divide. We also thank all the authors who submitted work to this volume, whether or not they made it into the book, because they saw the value of this topic. Those published herein, Michelle I. Gawerc, William F. Danaher, Trisha L. Crawshaw, Mustafa Yavaş, Cécile Mouly, Esperanza Hernández Delgado, María Belén Garrido, Vera Heuer, and Pamela Oliver, advance the field and impressively connected their research to Bringing Down Divides. The afterword was written under tight timing constraints, and we thank Patrick G. Coy and Lynne M. Woehrle for fondly providing more details about Greg's scholarship.

We appreciate the guidance and patience of the Emerald Group Publishing staff: Editorial Director of Humanities and Social Sciences, Philippa Grand, and Editorial Assistant, Rachel Ward. The Chapman University Graduate Editorial Assistant, Paige Gulley, helped with crucial copy editing and organization that brought Volume 43 to life.

Finally, all of the non-lead chapters were double-blind peer-reviewed, and this volume would not have come to fruition without the gracious time and talents of the following people, most of whom reviewed chapters twice: Mike Anastario, Victor Asal, Shane Barter, Cynthia Boaz, Kevin Carragee, Chares Demetriou, Josefina Echavarría, Yuval Feinstein, Michelle Gawerc, Adria Goodson, Yifat Gutman, Kelsy Kretchmer, Lester Kurtz, Amalia Perez Martin, Juan Masullo, Liora Norwich, Salvador Marti Puig, Preethi K Ramaswamy, Pete Simi, Tijen Demirel-Pegg, Mario Diani, Doron Shultziner, Matt Williams, and Omer Yair.
