ABOUT THE CONTRIBUTORS

Kathryn Freeman Anderson is an Associate Professor of Sociology at the University of Houston. She specializes in the sociology of health and illness, urban sociology, race/ethnicity, and organizations. Her recent work has been published in the Journal of Health and Social Behavior, City & Community, and Spatial Demography.

Matthew E. Archibald is an Assistant Professor of Sociology at the College of Mount Saint Vincent and Director of the Fishlinger Center for Public Policy Research. He studies health, illness, and health care. Recent work has focused on behavioral health disparities and health-care access.

Pamela Behrman is an Adjunct Professor of Psychology at the College of Mount Saint Vincent. She has worked extensively in both academic and clinical/school settings. Her recent scholarship efforts include publications on health disparities, psychological trauma, ACEs/toxic stress, and health policy.

Dr Bernadette Boden-Albala is the Director and Founding Dean of the Program in Public Health in the Susan & Henry Samueli College of Health Sciences at University of California, Irvine, where she is also a Professor in the Department of Health, Society, and Behavior and the Department of Neurology in the School of Medicine.

Dr Tim-Allen Bruckner is a Population Health Scholar who seeks to understand social, economic, and policy causes of health inequity. Much of his work attempts to isolate exposures, or antecedents, of health that approximate a natural experiment.

Dr Kathryn Burrows is an Assistant Professor of Sociology and Deaf Studies at Madonna University. She is also an independent scholar, and her research focuses on medical technology, medicalization, and mental health. She serves on the board of directors of several not-for-profit organizations that serve independent scholars and people with mental health disorders.

Kate Cartwright is an Associate Professor in the School of Public Administration and a faculty member of the Combined BA/MD program at the University of New Mexico. Her research focuses on health administration and health equity. She has worked on capacity building in rural medicine for seven years.

Maria Gabaldon-Parish is an undergraduate student in the Combined BA/MD program at the University of New Mexico studying Chemistry and Psychology.

Her research experience includes behavioral neuroscience and immunology. She aspires to serve the people of the Southwest by working in communities as a physician and contributing to medical research.

Dr Danielle N. Gadson is a Health Equity Expert and an Assistant Professor of Public Administration at Villanova University. She holds a BS in Economics from the Wharton School of Business at the University of Pennsylvania, an MPA from Villanova University, and a PhD in Medical Sociology from Temple University.

Subi Gandhi is an Associate Professor and Advisor of the Public Health Program at Tarleton State University. Her current research areas include geriatric health, student health, behavioral health, and disaster epidemiology. She holds a PhD from UNT Health Science Center, located in Fort Worth, TX.

Dr Sara H. Goodman graduated from the University of California, Irvine and now works as a Research Epidemiologist at Stanford University School of Medicine. She has research interests in COVID-19, Hepatitis C, STIs and HIV, and infectious disease epidemiology, key populations research and practice, and global health.

Janet R. Hankin is Professor Emerita of Medical Sociology at Wayne State University. She chaired the Medical Sociology Section of the American Sociological Association and coedited the 2010 Extra Issue of the Journal of Health and Social Behavior, "What Do We Know? Key Findings from 50 Years of Medical Sociology."

Rachel N. Head is an Assistant Professor of Sociology at the University of Tulsa. Her research addresses mental and physical health inequities for marginalized, underrepresented, or disadvantaged populations. Her current research focuses on employment and mental health utilizing the stress process framework.

Megan Henly, PhD, is Project Director at the University of New Hampshire Institute on Disability, where she leads the National Institute on Disability, Independent Living, and Rehabilitation Research-funded Advanced Rehabilitation Research and Training (ARRT) program on employment. Her work centers on employment, health, and well-being of the population with disabilities.

Erica S. Jablonski, PhD, is a Postdoctoral Research Associate at the University of New Hampshire Institute on Disability. Her research has explored the lived experiences of informal caregivers and caregiving team dynamics. She is interested in expanding on this work to encompass employment for people with disabilities and their caregivers.

Atsuko Kawakami is an Associate Professor of Sociology at Tarleton State University in Stephenville, Texas, USA. Her research interests include, but are not limited to, the following areas: social gerontology, health care, social networks and support systems among various groups, and Japan studies. She holds a PhD from Arizona State University.

Jennie Jacobs Kronenfeld is Professor Emerita in Sociology, SSFD, Arizona State University. Her research areas are medical sociology and aging and the life course with special focus on health policy, health-care utilization, and health behavior.

Dr Cynthia M. Lakon began her career at UC Irvine as an assistant professor in 2008 before becoming a tenured associate professor in May 2015 and then a full professor in 2022. Dr Lakon served as the Interim and Founding Chair of the Department of Health, Society, and Behavior from March 2020 until September 2022. With a strong passion for research, Dr Lakon has published numerous peer-reviewed articles as well as received various grants to fund her projects, including NIH. Through her work, Dr Lakon is recognized as an expert in adolescent social networks and substance abuse. Her research has appeared in journals including Social Science & Medicine, American Journal of Public Health, Social Networks and various media outlets including Yahoo News and Time magazine.

Derek Lehman is Assistant Professor of Sociology at Tarleton State University. His research and teaching are focused on religion, gender, and politics in the United States. He holds a PhD from Southern Illinois University, Carbondale.

Simone Rambotti is a Sociologist interested in health and well-being. He worked with the Louisiana COVID-19 Health Equity Task Force as chair of the Data and Analysis subcommittee. His recent work has been published in Social Science & Medicine and the Journal of Health and Social Behavior.
