ABOUT THE CONTRIBUTORS

Francesco Duina is Professor of Sociology and European Studies at Bates College. His research focuses on comparative regionalism and the relevance of nation states worldwide. His articles have appeared in journal such as the Journal of European Public Policy, Review of International Political Economy, and Economy and Society. His books include The Social Construction of Free Trade: The EU, NAFTA, and Mercosur (Princeton, 2006) and Broke and Patriotic: Why Poor Americans Love Their Country (Stanford, 2018).

Adrian Favell is Chair in Sociology and Social Theory at the University of Leeds and an associate of the Centre d'études européennes et de politique comparée (CEE), Sciences Po, Paris. He is the author of various works on multiculturalism, migration, cosmopolitanism, and cities, including Philosophies of Integration (Palgrave, 1998), The Human Face of Global Mobility (Taylor & Francis, 2006), and Eurostars and Eurocities (Wiley-Blackwell, 2008). A collection of his essays, Immigration, Integration, and Mobility, was published in 2015 (Rowman & Littlefield).

Andrea Ribeiro Hoffmann, Professor of International Relations at the Catholic University of Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, has published in the areas of comparative regionalism, Latin American regionalism, interregionalism, legitimacy, and democracy at the global level. Recent publications include “Democratic Theory Questions Informal Global Governance” (International Studies Review, 2019) and “Negotiating Normative Premises in Democracy Promotion: Venezuela and the Inter-American Democratic Charter” (Democratization, 2019).

Nicolas Jabko is an Associate Professor of political science at Johns Hopkins University. He is the author of Playing the Market: A Political Strategy for Uniting Europe, 1985–2005 (Cornell, 2006), co-editor of the eighth volume of the State of the European Union series (Oxford), and author of journal articles on European politics and political economy. His current research interests include neoliberalism, sovereignty, crisis politics, and constructivist and pragmatist approaches in political science.

Juan Díez Medrano is Professor of Sociology at Universidad Carlos III de Madrid. He writes on nationalism and European integration. His publications include Framing Europe (Princeton, 2003) and “Multilingualism and European Identity” (Sociological Inquiry, 2018). He just published Europe, in Love: Binational Couples and Cosmopolitan Society (Routledge, 2020).

Frédéric Merand is Professor of Political Science and Director of CÉRIUM at the University of Montreal Center for International Studies. His work focuses on European politics and the sociology of international relations. His articles have come out in such journals as International Studies Quarterly, West European Politics, Journal of Common Market Studies, European Journal of Political Research and Security Studies. For the past four years, he conducted an ethnography of the European Commission. He recently edited Coping with Geopolitical Decline: The United States in European Perspective (McGill-Queen's University Press, 2020)

Brendan O'Leary is the Lauder Professor of Political Science at the University of Pennsylvania and World Leading Researcher Visiting Professor of Political Science at Queen's University Belfast. His most recent book, A Treatise on Northern Ireland (three volumes), was published by Oxford University Press in 2019, and It won the 2020 James S. Donnelly Sr Prize for the best book in History and Social Science of the American Conference on Irish Studies.

Agnieszka Pasięka is sociologist and anthropologist. She is currently a research fellow at the University of Vienna where she is working on a book project on youth far-right movements. Her recent publications include "Anthropology of the Far Right, or: What if We Like the Unlikeable Others?" (Anthropology Today, 2019), "Taking Far-Right Claims Seriously and Literally: Anthropology and the Study of Right-Wing Radicalism" (Slavic Review, 2017), and Hierarchy and Pluralism. Living Religious Difference in Catholic Poland (Palgrave, 2015).

Krzysztof J. Pelc is an Associate Professor and William Dawson Scholar in the Political Science department at McGill University. His research examines the international political economy, with a focus on international rules. He is the author of Making and Bending International Rules: The Design of Exceptions and Escape Clauses in Trade Law (Cambridge, 2016) and numerous articles in journals such as Political Analysis, Journal of Politics, and International Organization.

Helen Thompson is Professor of Political Economy in the Department of Politics and International Studies, Cambridge University. She has published on the Eurozone crisis in New Political Economy, the British Journal of Politics and International Relations, and Foreign Affairs.
