GENDER VISIBILITY AND ERASURE

This superb volume is an impressive response for an inclusive sociology! Uncovering the buried contributions of women scholars and the many missing voices from the discipline, the contributors move scholarship away from invisibility and erasure of the past and present and toward reclaiming sociology.

ABOUT THE CONTRIBUTORS

Tyrone Ali is a Lecturer in English Language and Academic Writing at The University of the West Indies. The 1993 Recipient of the President's Medal for Teacher Education in The Republic of Trinidad and Tobago lists his research and publication interests as Caribbean Literatures, Masculinity Studies, and Tertiary Level Writing.

Tânia Mara Campos de Almeida, Ph.D., is Associate Professor in the Department of Sociology and member of the Center of Studies and Research on Women at the University of Brasília, Brazil. She is an investigator at the National Research Council of Brazil and has publications on the themes: gender, violence, race, and education.

Gabriela Artazo, Ph.D. in Political Science, is a Post-doctoral fellow at the CIECS-CONICET-UNC, Professor at the Faculty of Social Sciences, University of Córdoba, and International Master in Mercosur. Her work includes feminisms-feminist studies on the sex industry and welfare.

Suzana M. Ávila, Ph.D. in Civil Engineering, is a member of the Graduate Program in Materials Integrity and Assistant Professor in the Faculty of Engineering, University of Brasília, Brazil. She has experience with structural mechanics, structural dynamics, and control systems, working mainly on dynamics (linear and nonlinear) and control.

Elizabeth Heger Boyle, Ph.D., J.D., is Professor in the Department of Sociology, University of Minnesota, USA. She researches the human right to health, especially for women and children, in low- and middle-income countries. To promote this right, her team provides free and open access to comparative health data at IPUMS Global Health.

Kátia Tarouquella Brasil, Ph.D., is Professor in the Clinical Psychology Department and at the Graduate Program in Clinical Psychology and Culture at the University of Brasília, Brazil. She is an Associate Researcher at the “Centre de Recherche sur les Risques et Vulnérabilités-CERReV”, University of Rouen/France, and member of the International Association of Psychodynamics of Work.

Erika Busse, Ph.D., is Assistant Professor in the Department of Sociology, Macalester College, USA, and studies the social construction of motherhood following the reproductive justice framework. Her scholarship examines the experiences of transnational mothers juggling gender, class, and racial hierarchies from both their home country and the country of reception.

Domenica Gisella Calabrò holds a Ph.D. in Cultural Anthropology and is currently Lecturer and Coordinator of Gender Studies at the University of the South Pacific, Fiji. Her research interests include gender constructions and relations, indigeneity, sport, migration, violence, and decolonization of knowledge and academia in the Pacific region.

Barbara H. Chasin is Professor Emerita of Sociology, Montclair State University, USA. Her research and publishing focus on development issues and causes and consequences of inequality. She has authored or co-authored articles and several books, including Inequality and Violence in the United States: Casualties of Capitalism.

Aline S. De Paula, Ph.D. in Mechanical Engineering, is currently an Associate Professor in the Department of Mechanical Engineering at the University of Brasília. She has experience in dynamics and vibrations, working mainly on the following topics: vibrations, nonlinear dynamics, chaotic behavior, chaos control, and intelligent structures.

Mary Jo Deegan, Ph.D. University of Chicago, 1975, is Professor Emerita at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, USA, and Executive Director of the Jane Addams Research Center in St. Joseph, Michigan, USA. Deegan has published 20 books and some 200 articles, specializing in the history of sociology and women in sociology.

Paraskevi-Viviane Galata, Ph.D. in Social Sciences, is Adjunct Lecturer at Hellenic Open University, Greece. Working in the fields of sociology of work, social stratification, and occupational mobility, she explores the social effects of crisis, relative deprivation, and subjective inequality. Her publications appear in journals including Social Policy and Social Cohesion and Development.

Valérie Ganem, Ph.D. in Psychology, is Master and Doctoral Advisor at Sorbonne Paris Nord University, UTRPP, UR 4403, F-93430, Villetaneuse, France. Her research interests include psychodynamics of work and are related to incidences of transatlantic trade slavery heritage, conducted in Guadeloupe and in Brazil. She created the method “clinical-historic” in this area.

Romitesh Kant is Ph.D. Researcher at the Australian National University, and an Honorary Research Associate at the La Trobe University, Australia. His research interests include constitution design and democratization in ethnically divided societies, youth political activism, and impact of Information and Communication Technologies on politics in the Pacific. He has been engaged with the human rights, social justice and pro-democracy movement in Fiji since 2003.

Hannah Kasak-Gliboff is a recent graduate of the New York University Abu Dhabi with a BA in Social Sciences and minor in Arabic and Environmental Studies. She is interested in labor and human rights and views climate justice as an essential means to racial and gender equality. Her other research takes a behavioral science approach to environmental values and action.

Jasbant Kaur is a human rights and feminist activist, an independent consultant, and an early-career researcher whose interests include mental health, gender and social justice. She holds a Postgraduate Certificate in Gender Studies and a Postgraduate Diploma in Social Policy from the University of the South Pacific, Fiji.

Marla H. Kohlman is a Professor of Sociology at the Kenyon College where she teaches courses on gender, family, law, and stratification. Her research places emphasis upon intersectionality as a social justice paradigm of theory. She has used intersectional theory to examine the prevalence of sexual misconduct in the military and the US labor market.

Laura Kramer is Professor Emerita of Sociology at Montclair State University, USA, where she taught and wrote about gender and work. Her involvement with the NSF ADVANCE community since 2001 has included evaluation, consulting, and reviewing. She thanks her mother for her awareness of ageism and interest in anti-ageist activism.

Preethi Krishnan, Ph.D. is an Assistant Professor of Sociology at Western Carolina University, USA. Her research interests include social movements, intersectional inequalities, violence against women, development, and state. Her research appears in journals such as Mobilization, Current Sociology, The Global South, Indian Anthropologist, and in edited volumes.

Simone Aparecida Lisniowski, Psychologist, Ph.D. in Sociology and Postdoctoral Research in Education, is Assistant Professor in the Department of Theory and Fundamentals at the Faculty of Education, University of Brasília, Brazil. She coordinates two extension projects: Fast Girls Project in CEMEB School and Theater of the Oppressed at School.

Sidhant Maharaj is an Intersectional Queer Feminist Activist and an early career researcher with interests in gender, intersectionality, LGBTIQIA+ rights, disability, post colonialism, decolonizing fashion and human rights. Sidhant is currently completing a Postgraduate Diploma in Gender Studies at the University of the South Pacific, Fiji.

Max Osborn (they/them, he/him) received their Ph.D. in Criminal Justice from John Jay College and the City University of New York Graduate Center. Their research focuses on social control, institutional harm toward LGBTIQIA+ people, and the consequences of abuse and trauma.

Maria Jesús Rodríguez-García is Lecturer in the Department of Sociology at the University Pablo de Olavide, Seville. She is Researcher and Vice-director of the Center for Sociology and Local Policies at that University. Her research interests focus on gender inequalities and welfare policies in a comparative perspective.

Rima Sabban, Ph.D., is Associate Professor in the Department of Humanities and Social Sciences, Zayed University, UAE. She is the author of the books Maids Crossing and Motherhood, along with multiple publications on youth, globalization, and gulf civil society. Her areas of expertise include women, motherhood, family and youth in the Gulf, migration, domestic work, and slavery.

Maura Angélica Milfont Shzu, Ph.D. in Structures and Civil Construction, is Associate Professor in the Faculty of Engineering, University of Brasília, Brazil. She is working in the areas of structural analysis, optimization, and fracture mechanics. Currently, she also explores issues about gender x engineering and is engaged in the Fast Girls Project.

Dianne Magalhães Viana, Ph.D. in Civil Engineering, is a Mechanical Engineer and Associate Professor in the Faculty of Technology, University of Brasília, Brazil. She has experience in educational and creative methodologies, and in research in the areas of machine design and product design. Also, she coordinates the Fast Girls Project.

Gabriela Bard Wigdor holds a Ph.D. in Gender Studies and is a Researcher Assistant at Ciecs-CONICET-UNC and Professor at the Faculty of Social Sciences of the University of Cordoba. Master and degree in Social Work from UNC, she also holds a diploma in feminisms of Abya Yala. Her work focuses on feminisms, feminist studies of masculinity, and decolonial studies.
