

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

An edited volume of this magnitude could never be completed without support, encouragement, and inspiration from others. First, I take this opportunity to recognize my wonderful wife, Stephanie M. Moore, and three children, James IV, Sienna Ava, and Savanna Marie-Ann, for providing the needed space and time to complete this book project. Without their support, completing this book would have been impossible. Second, I wish to recognize my deceased mother, Edna M. Moore, and grandmother, Mable Miller, who were some of my greatest supporters and admirers. Although they are no longer here on Earth, nothing can ever weaken the special moments and experiences we shared. Third, I want to acknowledge my brother, Marcus T. Moore, and sister, Dr. S. Rochelle Moore, for their unwavering encouragement and assistance throughout my life. Fourth, I express my gratitude to my close extended family and friends, especially my Aunt Frances and Uncle WC Anderson. Fifth, I want to recognize my current and former students, as well as past teachers, professors, coaches, and mentors for being an intricate part of my life trajectory. Sixth, I wish to offer a special “shout out” to my students, staff, and supporters of the Todd Anthony Bell National Resource Center on the African American Male, as well as my colleagues, students, and staff who have supported me in both the Office of Diversity and Inclusion and the College of Education and Human Ecology at The Ohio State University. Seventh, I want to recognize the authors who contributed to this edited volume and thank Emerald Press for including this book in its portfolio of published works. Eighth and above all, I thank my Creator for always extending opportunities to contribute to society.

I would like to acknowledge my mother, Mrs. Brenda Clem Davis, who shared with me her love for teaching and how an educator can make a positive impact on a person’s life. Words cannot convey my appreciation enough. I also would like to acknowledge my grandparents, Dr. William W. Clem, Mr. Lloyd O. Lewis Sr., Mrs. K. Frances Thomas, and Mrs. Peggy Lewis, who also played a major role in my life. Although they all rest in peace, I am grateful for the time we spent together. Finally, I want to express my gratitude to my many current and former students for giving me the opportunity to work with them. I have found the experience both rewarding and exhilarating.
